PRIMARY SOURCE OVERVIEW

<Documenting Detroit> is a collection of photographs taken by College for Creative Studies students in the 1970s and 1980s.

Under the guidance of Detroit photographer and photography instructor Bill Rauhauser, students turned the urban landscape into works of art. The collection includes nearly 1,250 photographs of Detroit, from churches to construction sites, grocery stores to warehouses, hospitals to schools, and many others.

The collection offers snapshot of Detroit during the late 20th century, including the Michigan Central Train Station, the J. L. Hudson's Department Store on Woodward Avenue, construction of the Renaissance Center and Joe Louis Arena, and the abandonment of Poletown and the Warehouse District. Photographs also document everyday Detroit, such as favorite restaurants (Jacoby's, Astoria Bakery, Pegasus Taverna, Circa 1890 Saloon, and Sweetwater Tavern), families on Belle Isle, and vendors at Eastern Market.

This primary source set includes photographs of Detroiters as they worked and played. Students are invited to observe and reflect on the people and their surroundings to develop a better understanding of Detroit in the not-too-distant past.

HISTORICAL BACKGROUND

By the 1970s, Detroit’s population had been dropping steadily as the suburbs grew and freeways made it easier to live away from the city center.

Rebounding from the 1967 Riots, Detroiters created new community organizations to help address the city’s problems. Focus: HOPE trained the city’s poorest residents for good jobs. New Detroit pooled ideas and support from the community’s business, civic, grassroots and religious leaders, including Coleman Young and Councilwoman Mary Beck.

A national recession in the early 1980s hit Detroit’s auto industry hard. Meanwhile, Detroit became nationally known as the “Murder Capital” of the U.S., and for its “Devil's Night” arsons on the eve of Halloween. When the Tigers won the 1984 World Series, the celebration’s destructive turn made national news.

However, during the same era, Detroit began hosting Grand Prix auto races, world-class music festivals, the 1980 Republican National Convention and Super Bowl XVI.
LEARNING OBJECTIVES
• Analyze a primary source photograph
• Make assumptions about photograph based on prior knowledge and close observation

MATERIALS
• Teacher’s Guide to Analyzing Photographs
• Primary Source Analysis Tool
• Primary Sources

PREPARATION
Make one copy for each student:
• One photo from collection
• Collections record for selected image
• Primary Source Analysis Tool

Print one copy of each of the other primary sources and their bibliographic records.

Recreate a blank Primary Source Analysis Tool on the board.

PROCEDURE
1. Distribute the copy of the selected photograph to each student.
2. Using the Teacher’s Guide to Analyzing Photographs, lead students through the process as a group. Fill in the Primary Source Analysis Tool on the board with their answers.
3. For the “Observe” column: ask students to only comment on the things they see in the photo.
4. For the “Reflect” column: ask the students to comment on what is happening in the photo.
5. For the “Question” column: ask the students what information the photo itself does NOT provide (i.e. names, location, etc.) Make a list of questions the students have about the photo.
6. Distribute the bibliographical information sheet to each student. Review as a class and discuss whether or not the information answers their questions. What questions remain?
7. Lead a discussion about what other sources could help them answer their remaining questions (i.e. other photographs, textbooks, letters, diaries, newspapers, the photographer, etc.)
8. Pass out a copy of the Primary Source Analysis Tool to each student. Place the students in groups of two to three and give each group one of the other primary source photographs.
9. Have each group work together to observe, reflect and create questions about their photograph. Each student should complete his or her own worksheet. Help the students by providing leading questions as needed (i.e. What do you notice first? What are the people wearing? What’s happening?)
10. Have each group provide a brief report to the class on their observations, reflections and questions.
11. Lead a class discussion about the primary sources. Ask students what all the photos had in common, and how they differed. Encourage them to formulate hypothesis about the unifying theme presented (in this case, people in Detroit in the 1970s.)

TEACHER’S GUIDE

ANALYZING PHOTOGRAPHS & PRINTS

OBSERVE

Have students identify and note details.

Sample Questions:
- Describe what you see.
- What do you notice first?
- What people and objects are shown? How are they arranged?
- What, if any, words do you see? What other details can you see?

REFLECT

Encourage students to generate and test hypotheses about the image.

Why do you think this image was made? What’s happening in the image? When do you think it was made? Who do you think was the audience for this image? What tools were used to create this?
- What can you learn from examining this image? What’s missing from this image? If someone made this today, what would be different? What would be the same?

QUESTION

Have students ask questions to lead to more observations and reflections.

What do you wonder about...

FURTHER INVESTIGATION

Help students to identify questions appropriate for further investigation, and to develop a research strategy for finding answers.

Sample Question: What more do you want to know, and how can you find out?

A few follow-up activity ideas:

Beginning
Write a caption for the image.

Intermediate
Select an image. Predict what will happen one minute after the scene shown in the image. One hour after? Explain the reasoning behind your predictions.

Advanced
Have students expand or alter textbook or other printed explanations of history based on images they study.
