JOIN AUTHORS DEBORAH J. LARSEN AND LT. COL. LOUIS J. NIGRO FOR A DISCUSSION OF “SELFRIDGE FIELD” WEDNESDAY, APRIL 14 AT THE DETROIT HISTORICAL MUSEUM

DETROIT - The Detroit Historical Society continues its popular Author Series with Deborah J. Larsen and Lt. Col. Louis J. Nigro, authors of “Selfridge Field,” published by Arcadia Publishing, on Wednesday, April 14 from 6 – 8 p.m. at the Detroit Historical Museum.

Selfridge Field, founded in 1917, was named in honor of Lt. Thomas E. Selfridge, the first person to die in a modern airplane crash. As the home of the First Pursuit Group, the base saw the many feats of young pilots like Charles Lindbergh, Jimmy Doolittle and Curtis LeMay. Because so many of the young aviators who passed through its gates achieved the rank of general officer, the base was nicknamed “Home of the Generals.” Larsen and Nigro will discuss the history of this historic military airfield and its role in the development of American airpower, from crude biplanes to the supersonic F-16 fighter.

The cost of the event is free for Detroit Historical Society members and $10 for the public. For more information or to register for the event, please call (313) 833-1801 or visit www.detroithistorical.org.

Larsen is the assistant director and local history librarian of the Mount Clemens Public Library. Nigro is the executive director of the Selfridge Military Air Museum. Before retiring from the Michigan Air National Guard, he served as an Operations Group and C-130 mission commander at Selfridge.
